

Editorial Board Members

The editorial staff and founding members of the Journal of Global Environmental Justice: Volume 3 at the University of California, Santa Cruz:

Abby Cunniff, Associate Editor

Abby Cunniff is a PhD candidate at UC Santa Cruz in Environmental Studies, with a designated emphasis in Sociology. She received her Bachelor of Arts with high honors from Wesleyan University, majoring in American Studies with a concentration in Indigenous Politics. She is also a 2023-24 Switzer Fellow for Environmental Leadership. Her public scholarship has focused on pressing issues that incarcerated people face due to prison conditions and climate change, while her academic work has focused on understanding prisons as part of larger structures of climate adaptation labor and carceral geographies. She is co-author of “We Are Not Disposable: The Toxic Impacts of Jails and Prisons” with Californians United for a Responsible Budget, a policy organization based in southern California.

Flynn Lloyd, Associate Editor

Flynn Lloyd (she/her) will be graduating from the University of Santa Cruz in Spring 2023 with a Bachelor of Arts in Environmental Studies Global Environmental Justice Concentration, and Film and Digital Media, Production Concentration. Alongside her editorial position for the Global Environmental Justice Journal, she is one of the co-Editors in Chief of the student run newspaper of record, City on a Hill Press. She finds passion and power in academic writing and scholarship accessibility, and wants her role in the Global Environmental Justice Journal to increase the availability to environmental, political, and social research/knowledge. Her academic work at the UC and the journal have inspired her current Senior project investigating and supporting the 30 year-old Beach Flats Community Garden, amidst threats of lease termination and battles between community members and private companies.
